
There is good news in Canadian radio, if you know where to listen

While recent gains give broadcasters a reason to celebrate, corporate cutbacks and challenges from tech giants make their medium's future anything but clear

BEN KAPLAN

SPECIAL TO THE GLOBE AND MAIL

PUBLISHED FEBRUARY 11, 2025

UPDATED FEBRUARY 13, 2025

This content is available to globeandmail.com subscribers.

Join a national community of curious and ambi

Subscribe to globeandmail.com for unlimited access to Canada's leading independent journalism.

~~$7.99 PER WEEK~~

JUST $0.99

PER WEEK FOR YOUR FIRST 24 WEEKS

SUBSCRIBE NOW

CANCEL ANYTIME

New Subscribers Only

Already a print newspaper subscriber? Get full access to globeandmail.

Already subscribed to globeandmail.com? Log in to keep reading

Report an editorial error

Report a technical issue

Editorial code of conduct

Related stories

EU debates ways to keep Radio Free Europe afloat after Trump orders staff cuts at U.S.-funded media

Carney pledges $150-million funding increase for CBC/Radio-Canada – with more to come

Americans will emerge from Trump 2.0 with less influence than ever before

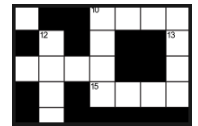

ROBERT ROTBERG

Take a Break

Check your horoscope to learn how the stars align for you today.

Sharpen your mind with today's Cryptic Crossword.

Refine your strategy and solve the Daily Sudoku.

Relax and engage with the Daily Concise Crossword.

